WHAT: IS 3MT?
The Basics

• 180 seconds/ 3 minutes/ ~450 words
• 1 static powerpoint slide
  – No props or other media
  – No transitions or animations
  – No singing, rapping, etc.
• Present your research to a non-specialist audience
  – A panel of multidisciplinary judges
  – Faculty in other disciplines
  – York alumni
  – Other graduate students
  – Members of the public
What’s the Value of 3MT?

• Designed as an opportunity to showcase exciting graduate research
• Requires students to think beyond the boundaries of their usual presentation styles
  – Conference papers, Lectures, Tutorials
• Gives students the skills to talk about their research to anyone, and to make it both intelligible and interesting: the ultimate elevator pitch
  – Great preparation for job interviews, networking events, talking to people at conferences
• Share research with broad audiences
• ...and there are prizes for winners
Eligibility

• Students must be registered in a research-based Master’s (Thesis or MRP) or PhD program at the time of the 3MT competition, and must have made substantial progress on their research and analysis. Course-based Masters students are ineligible.

• PhD and Masters students who have defended, but have not convocated at the time of the York University 3MT competition, are eligible to participate.

• 3MT presentations must represent the student’s primary research (i.e. thesis, dissertation, or MRP research).

• Presenters must agree to be video-recorded, and to allow those recordings to be made public (Ontario Finals only).
Judging Criteria

Exercise 1

• What are the effective elements of the sample 3MT presentations?

• Think about
  – Comprehension & Content
  – Communication style
  – Audience engagement
  – What else?
General Tips

• Simple, but not simplified
• Clear language (jargon free and explain concepts, people, terminology)
• Shorter sentences, shorter paragraphs
Effective 3MT: An Engaging Opener

• Crafting the opener of your 3MT presentation
  – Introducing your research topic
  – Draw the interest of audiences (relating to a broad topic of interest, personal stories, etc.)
Effective 3MT: Impact

• Articulating the importance of your research
  – Why should people care about your research
  – What’s the connection between your research and the world?
    • In other words, why does your research matter?
  – What did you find that may change the world (even in a slightest way)?
Presentation Strategies

• Audience engagement
• Clear and confident body language
• Good posture
• Facial expression, eye contact
• Strong and steady voice projection
  • No nervous tics Um, ah, like
  • Playing with jewelry/hair/clothing
  • Pacing or, conversely, standing in one place
• No notes or prompts
• No looking back at the PowerPoint
Giving your 3MT a Title

- Short and snappy
- Attention grabbing
- Jargon-free
- NOT the title of your actual thesis/dissertation
The Slide

• Use visuals to support (and not to distract from) the story you’re telling in your presentation
• Avoid clutter
• Make it visually engaging
• Use as little text as possible
Exercise 2

Share your research with peers. In doing so, explain:

– Your research topic
– Major findings
– Impact of your research

... in 3 minutes (if possible!)
